ALL IN COLOUR - MAKES LEARNING A JOY

Once Upon a Ime PRICE 1/3

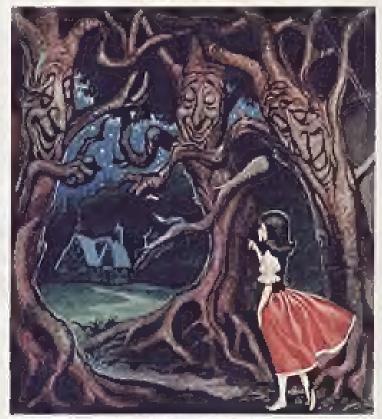

T. The worked Queen, Snow White's stepmother, had been told by the magic mirror on the wall that she was no losger the fairest in the land and she fleer into a jestious rage. She commanded one of the Royal bunismen to take snow White into the forest and there get rid of her. All night long, the huntaman sat and watched Snow White playing with the animals.

2. "She is so sweet end kind," he thought. "How could I kill such a fair and gentle gri as that? Ashough the Queen has commanded me to do so, I cannot bring mysell to perform such a wicked deed." "It's so lovely here is the forest," said Snow White, as she played and talked with the wild creatures. "I would be happy to stay here for ever and ever."

 Nearing this, the husisman chose a moment when Snow White was not looking and he stole questly away through the trees and made his way back to the Palace. "I will tell the Queen that the forest animals have dealt with Snow White," he said.

4. Show White was puzzled when she looked round and saw no sign of the hunterest. Having no lides of the way back to the Palace she wandered on and on until night felt. The kindly old trees seemed to be backening her lowerds a quaint old cottage.

5. The door was open and Snow write went in and in a candle. She gaw a table laid for supper, with seven plates and cape. "I wonder who lives here?" she said to herself, "Oh dear, I am so hungry that I'm rune they would spare me a little lood. I will pay them tack sometow." So Snow White set down at the wooder table, are some of the food and drank from a jug of milk.

b. Still hobody came and Snow White found herself yearning as she waited. "I'm so very fired after wandering all night and all day through the forest," she said, in the next room she found seven little bods. They looked so inviting that she could not resist fying down one of them. She was so tired that as soon as her head touched the pillow she fell askeep.

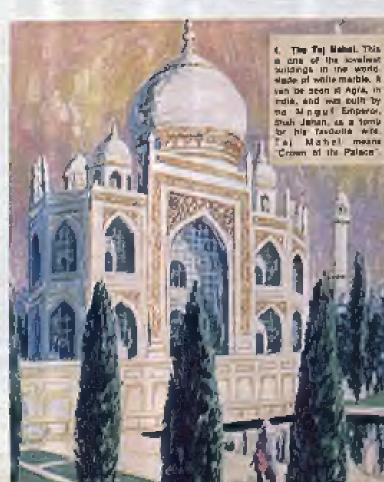

7. When it was quite dark the owners of the cottage returned. They were seven little dwarfs, who worked all day in a mine underneath the mountains, digging for gold. They never based very much, but they were such happy little people that they just worked to get a good appetite for supper. Some of them carried showers and some cairried pick-axes on their shoulders.

fig. "My, my !" said the youngest one, leading the way with a lanters on a pole, "We're nearly home, my brothers. Then we will say our support and pop off to bed as usual." "As usual?" chacked Brock the Badger from his home in the roots of a tree. "They won't find everything as they left it, I'm affaid. The seven dwarfs are going to get a very big surprise."

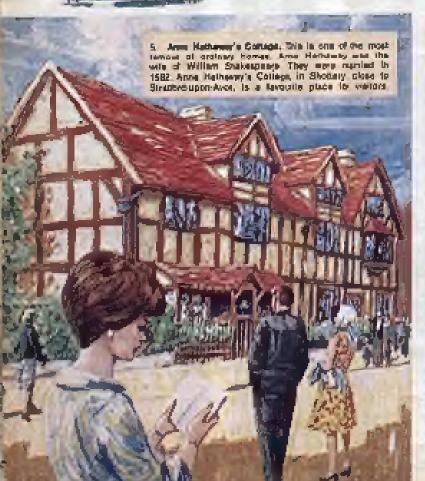

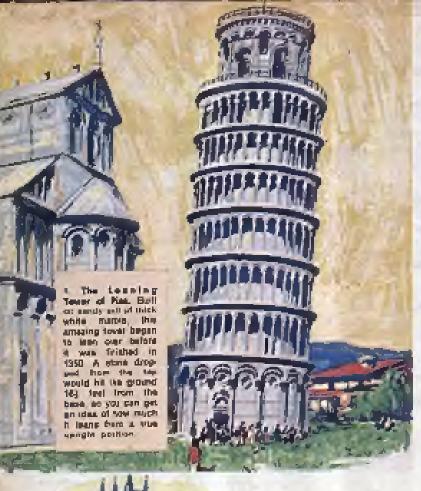

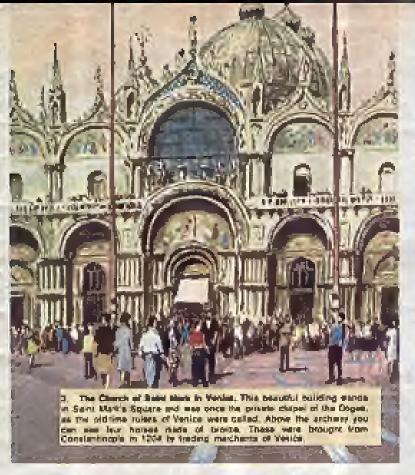

7. A Crofter's Cottage, in the wilder parts of Sections a small place of land for raising sheet or training food has defined a croft. The voltages of the criticis were strongly built, and, as you can see lough slabs of store and their; while used

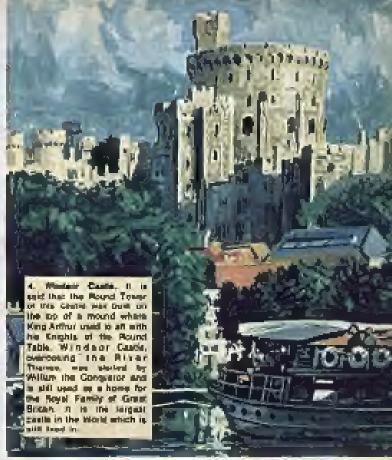

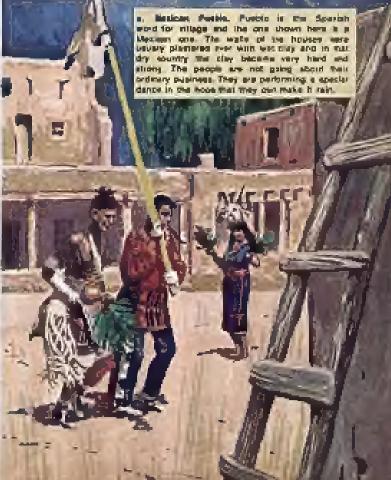

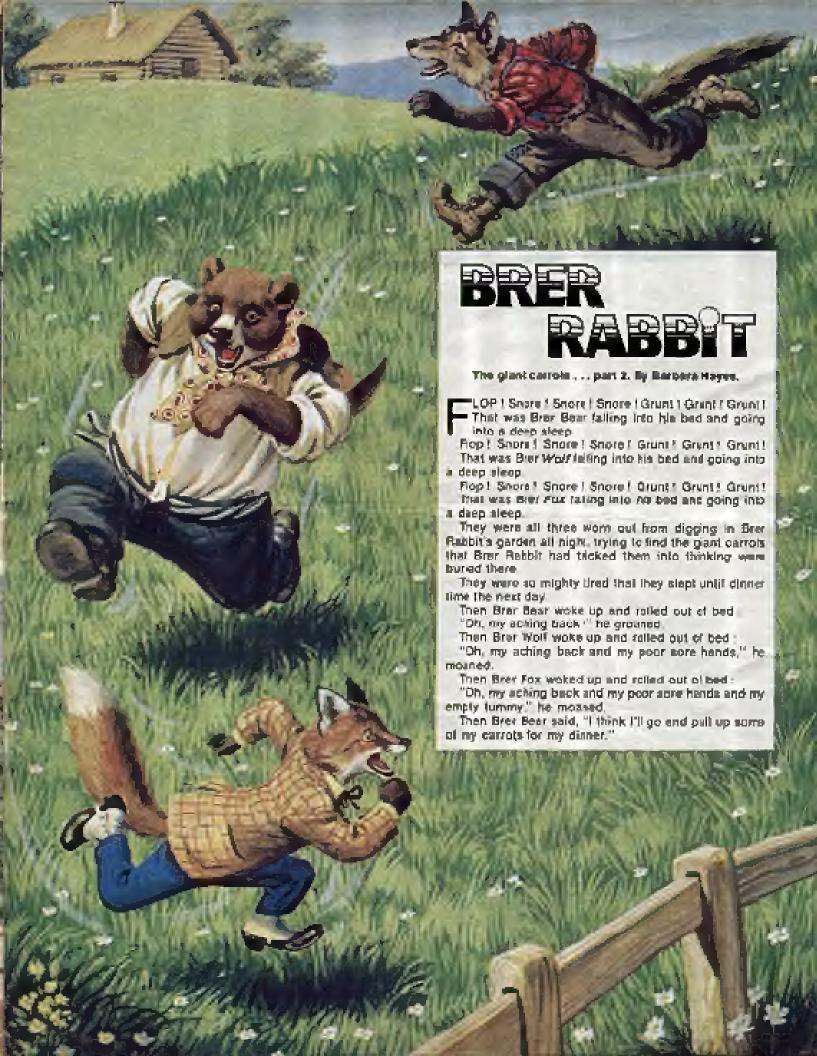

of Buildings

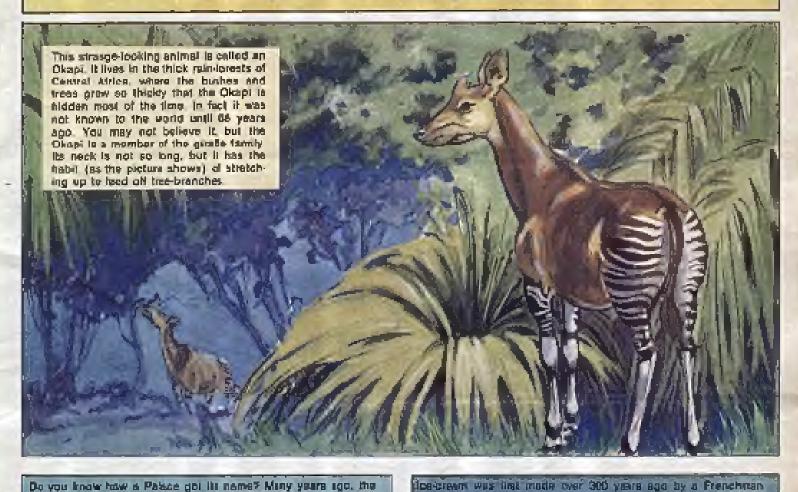

Fresh food from the sea

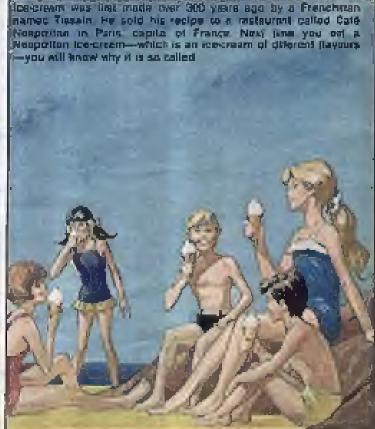

The net is hauled in end the "catch" comes out of the sea. The lish are then kept in cold storage and are leash and tasty to eas when bought in a shop.

Well, Fancy That!

first Emperor of Ancient Rome was named Augustus and he built a great hause on one of the Sevan Hills of Anno called the Palarina Hill, or Palatium it is from the name Palatium that we get the name Palace

Published by the Proprieson, City Magazines Ltd., 157, Free Street, London E.C.4, and printed by Resognature, Leiden (Holland) and London Cities

This is a Memory Test. When you have read the Mary, farn to page 18 and try to answer the questions about it, to see how good a memory you have.

A horse with wheels

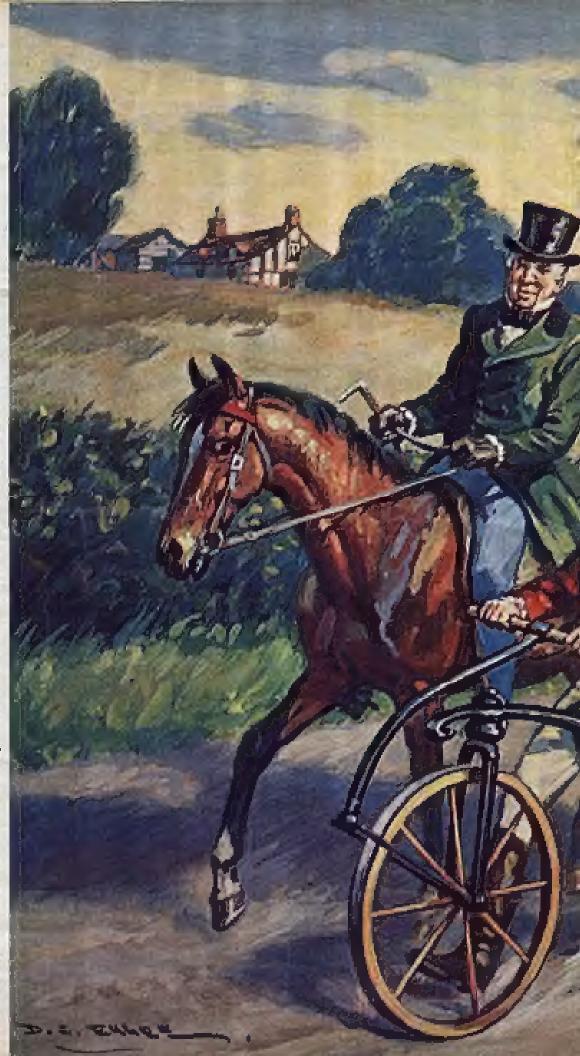

BOUT a hundred years ago. when people thought of making a journey, it was usually a horse which had the job of taking them from one place to another Then a man nemed Baron de Vrais. had a bright idea and bivented a new kind of machine for use on the roads. It had a saddle to sit on, a steering bar which the ricer held in his hands, much like the rains of a horse—and he called it a velocipede, which is a word which means "speed by feel". When you look at this strange invention, you will see why. The rider used his feet to move it along on its wheels. However, it soon became known as a hobby-horse, for people thought that it was like a horse with wheels instead of legs. Some of them even called it a bone-shaker, for it jolled and larred along the stony highways, which were very bumpy at that Ilme.

You can see that the travellers in the ceach are all furning round to cheer and feer as the hobby-horse rider passes by. The guard gives a toot on his horn and the driver waves his whip, as if to say that such things should not be allowed on the roads.

"Nothing will come of a silly thing like that," said many people, but they were quite wrong. The hobby-herse was really the first bleydle, which millions of people now ride all over the world. The bicycle, however, only became popular when a clever man named John Duniop made an air-filled bicycle tyre in the year 1888.

Today, John Dunlop's invention of an air-filled tyre has been used in every country where there are blaycles, motor-care and sero-planes

When next you ride your bloycle or go for a ride in a car, you should remember the name of Baron de Vrais, who really started it all with his invention of the "horse with wheels"

The Duke who was fat

There was once a Duke who was very very las in fact he was quite the ladest Duke that ever was and he inved to the town of Goggle-Glock But because he was also very vain he would not plant appears to say that he was told if are not a fet man-if are a HEAVY man the would fell describinly in the treets

I am so unfortunate to be such a heavy man. The Duke would It makes the no sat of breath wheat I walk walling and went everywhere in his home-comage. He did not mally mind this, because he was laty as well as greatly. The poor horse did not like it very much, though

Co he give up

The reason why the Duce was so for a not hard to guess. He was, in fact, the greederst person in all Goggre-Gloop. He liked nothing better than to asi and asi until he could set no more. To pay for all his food he would make his people pay more taxes. So he betsion. The said they became popular

As the years went by the Duke became failer and failer or heavier and heaver as he reguld describe himself. One day when he stepped into his carriage the wooden floor gave way and his reguwent eight through. My postiness, that must have been made of some very thin good wood, said the Duke.

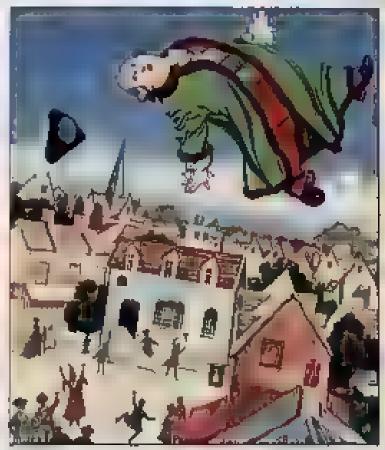

5 The driver sid not notice this "Gre-up t" he said, and packed his whip. Away want the barse and line Duke had to run as last as he could to keep up with it it was the likelitime he had run sacer he was a boy and did not onjoy it at all.

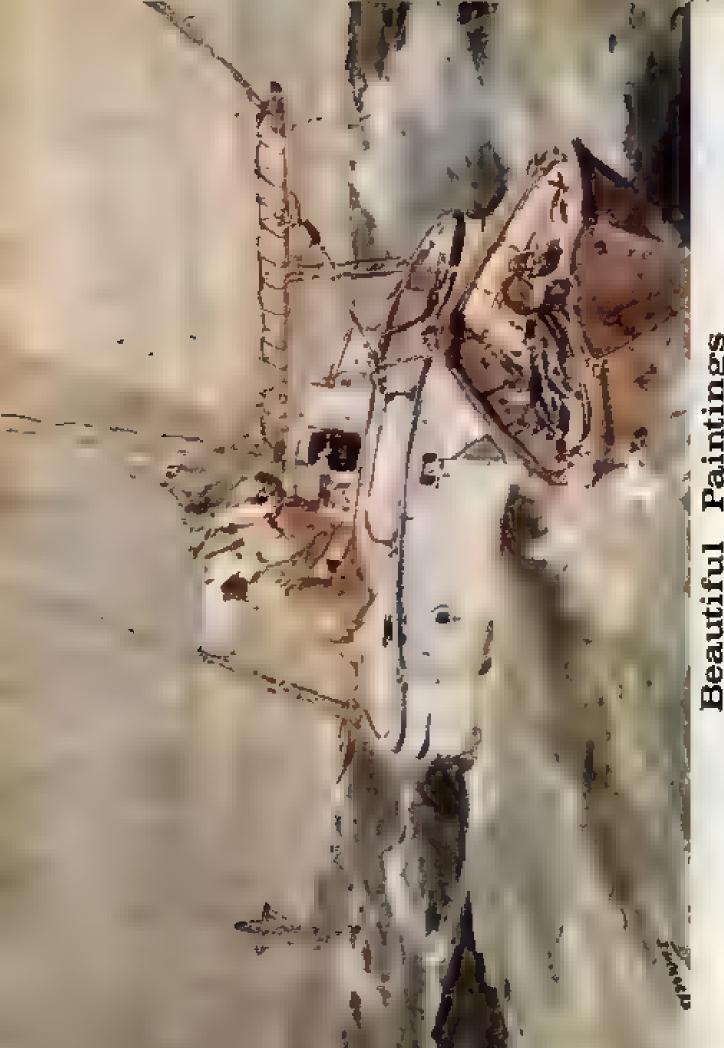

6 Shill the Duke would not admit that the trouble had been caused because he was so lat. "It's my weight is a decided often he had got his beath back, " must do something about it. So he sent for the vessel magican in Gegyle-Gloop.

7 "First of all." said the magician. "are you quite sure you want to get rid all your weight?" "Quite sure, moddet the Duke "Very wall, then, said the magician, and he waved his magic wand Then a strange thing nappened The Duke began to float up into the six like a big balloon with waving sums and legs.

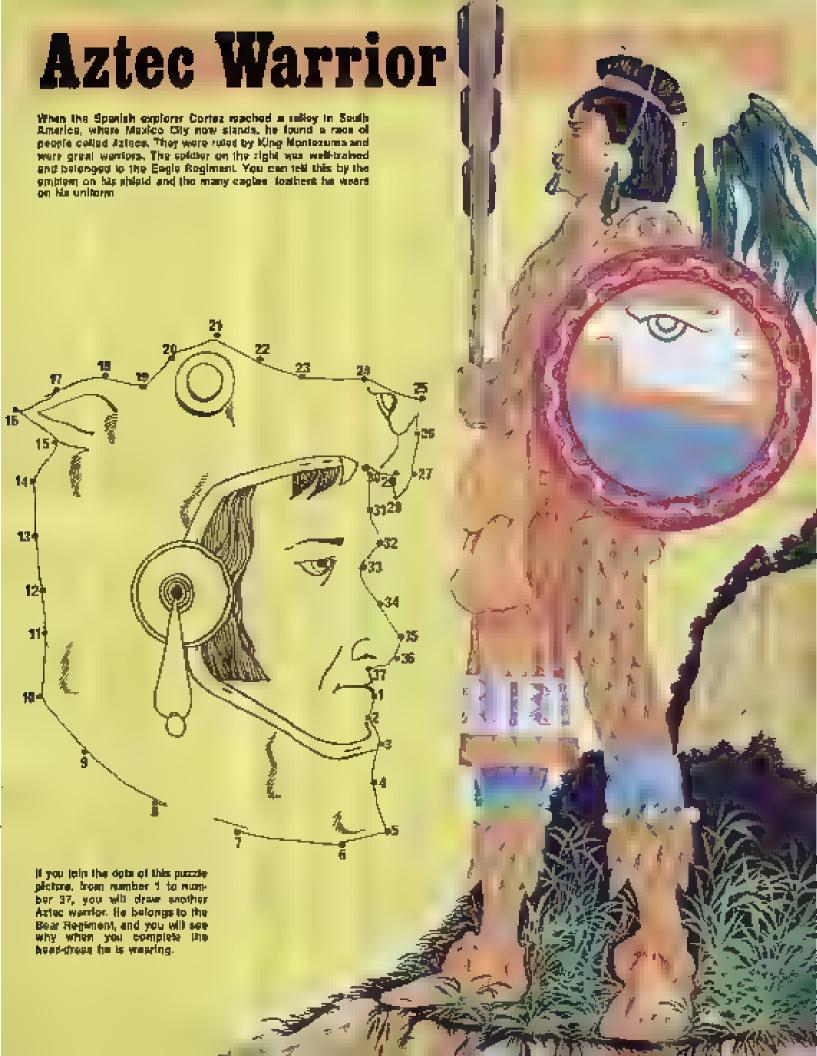

6 The magician had done as the Duke had asked and although the Duke was still as fat as ever he now had no weight at all. Higher and higher he flooted into the air and not writt he promised to est less did the magician bring him down again. "Yes, everybody was right, the agreed." was indeed too tat."

Beautifu

Mos can almost hear he right of the water and fissie that fang or soft speay in the outes you take at this persons which is collect. Ourseard Bound Two man in their floringboat are setting off to earn their living by catching cootish. Anhough do sea is rough with white horses showing and he sky is dark with clouds. We'v seem not the basis bit worried. They have offen done the into before and if hat become part of their kie

The little best spiritabling trend carries some fish which they are used spiritable as bail and a clear trend or a proper manner of the parties and the carried and the full of fresh drinking-winter—and the proper name or the enall basis is a dory. If has yony capital and some some the properties of by permission of the Pather Gallery London,

The Torm Mouse and the Country Mouse

This work—A Highley in Parts, by Barbara Hapon.

H. what a lovely house You must be very rich, Mr Souris gasped Winifed, the country

She was talking to her friend the French modes, who had invited Wintfred and Scrite and Stephanic and high for a

FRAN

"hank you, Miss Winshed," smaled Paul Souris, "And what do you think of my home. Miss Stephanie?"

Slephanie, the town mouse, stepped into the lounge with its tall white walks and beautiful gold-painted plaster work.

The year quite nice. she smiled. The room is quite as large as my foom at home, but it's still not too bad—I mean it storely.

Pren Stephanie went on "But show us the rest of the house. Paul, parhaps some of the other rooms are bigger than this tiny—I mean. /ove/v one."

Mintified was hostilled.

to Stephania

Dh. pull yourself together, Whilited," Stephanie whapered back, "I know this house is wonderful but we must not let Paut think it is better than we are used to or he will start treating us liter poor take the

"You meen how you treat me?" asked Wilnitred:

Stephania just repited with a glare, in her heart she knew she shouldn't ensure at Winifred, her country cousts, in the south a series of the south and the south all came slipping out before she could stop there.

At all events, when key had seen the res of the res, been ful forms and water. Stephales are water by See, is by this first name—Paul—about see times rust to lef him know that she felt she was just as good as he was. Mr. Paul Souria said. Now would you like me to sake you for a trip round Paris to see the sights?"

How kind of you, thank you, sale. Winted in her nice police way

But, of course Stephanie couldn't stop

No wonder you want to see the sights. Windred," she taughed, "You look a bit of a sight rourself in that hand-kniked fumper and home-made skirt you are

Oh, our Stephanie Don't go on su said good-natured Winifred

But Mr. Paul Souris made up his mind that Stephanie ought to be taught a terson

While the other mice were getting into his aptended our Paul acribbled a pale and earl it so his sister. Fith The note read.

Door Fift,

When I call on you with my English friends, please admire Miss Winifred's hand-souted jumper and say it is the americal thing you have seen in years.

Love,

So after the churse had driven round Parls and seep all the alghts, they called for lunch at the home of Paul's stater

She wilcomed from in and then after they had been introduced, she stepped back with a gasp of admiration

"Why I" she exid. "Please excuse me for saying something personal, but that jumper you are wearing. Miss Winifred it is the most beautiful and smartest that I have seen in years. In it hand-knitted?

Winifred went pick with pisasure

Yes, II is," she smiled, "Actually I

Hope emological equal on File

Stephanie was ferious

She had expected Fill to admire the time creas the late was welling nor to fuse about Winterd's lumber thought Paris ladies were supposed to have such good taste in clothes," met tered Stephanie to Nigel "Wall, all can say, to-us had in a new section as good laste or not, she must be joily about sighted I she thinks Windred's woolly jumper tooks amert."

"Never mend old thing !" revier! Nige! Let's forget about clothes and enjoy our land?

So they did, because, as everyone known french cooling is very good

There will be more stood the price by Padefred work. Here the questions treat the seary & Here this three's an page 16 has here reday per man get right servers serving back in the story to check your

- BYTO deal for man left made the first footing home?
- The second of the T
- What 6d some people call it when the tobby-horse bumped over the toute?
- 4. It which was did a in Duning may the right at view at

Sinbad the Sailor

 After being cost upon a strange fained. Birded the Sallor climbed to the top of a hill and was thrilled to see a horse, saddled and bridled and ready for riding. Eagerly he went towards it, but suddenly a man appeared from behind a reck. At this Sinbad hatted, not knewing whether this man was a friend or an enemy.

2. Birbad sank fown on to a rock, too tired to care what was about to happen to him. "I was a trader, good sir," he said. "The ship on which I was transling was wrecked by a whate and I was the only one who survived." The man smiled and said he was a groom, looking after the house for the island's King.

 Perhaps we look a Report race of securit than we really are," the grown said in a tindly voice to Sinbad. "Come with me to the Royal stables in a deep cavern under the mountain."

 Inside the hope care were often forces, all being heroist by groots. Sinbad's eyes opened wide with wonder and when they offered him food and drink, he was very grateful for it.

5. "We must now take you to our King," said the groom. "He is in his Pataco, which is about two miles away. Now and then we are visited by ships from other lands, but never before have we had a stranger cast upon our shore. Can you rido a horse?"

6. Sinbad noticed and was soon seatest on the back of a splendid home, riding alongside the groom at the head of a prancepton which made its way towards a magnificent palace on a hill. 'That is where you will meet our most honourable King." sold the groom.

7. Inside the Palace, Sinbed was taken into the throne room and those the King greated him is a friendly manner "Your Majesty is most kind," said Sinbad, raising his arms and bewing lev. Then Sinbed told the King all about himself.

6. "On this island we are in need of willing workers," said the King. "You can stay here and you will be housed and fed if you agree to give your loyal help." Sinbad, who had lost all his possessions, readily agreed to become an island worker.

9. He was given the task of loading and unleading the trading ships which called at the island, and one day he was checking some bales of goods taken of a ship which had just arrived.

to, "By all the wenders of the world, these are MY goods," said Sinbad with a goop of surprise. "They were on the ship weekled by the plant whole!" (More of this Sinbad etary west wook.)

FAMOUS NAMES

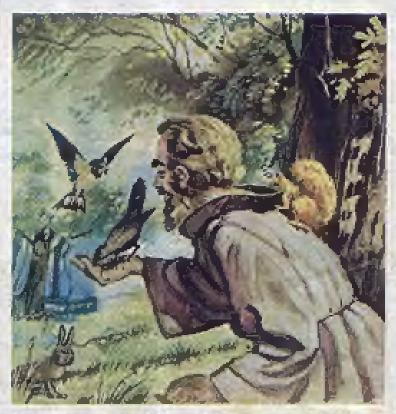

languages faces, shoult magnify and others in our maritime, words.

 After the Great, Alted the Great was King of the Saxons, who had in the West of England, in his day, the Danes were invading the land, but Altred lought several great battles egainst them on land and see, and bravely drove them back.

 Cape Kernedy, Cape Kernedy is a strip of land is America, overlooking the Atlantic Ocean. It is from here that glant rockets are faunched with apace-explorers inside them. As the whole world knows, some have traveled to the Moon and seck.

2. Saint Francis of Assist. This saintly man gave away all his money and fine clothes, then want preaching around the world, paymonted and wearing a rough grey rose, the war such a gentle man that the birds and animals were not straid of him.

4. Captain Cook. Captain Cook was a famous British smilns who made long voyages to Australia, New Zoaland and the Pacific Islands when they were not known. He made exact maps of these new lands and look careful roles of everything he saw.